PRESCOTT JOURNAL-MINER, WEDNESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 20, 1920.

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR

WOMEN STUDY POLITICAL ISSUES

The increasing tendency of women in politics to turn to the republican party and platform, and the fact that the republican party, through a long period of struggle, finally was responsible for the enactment of woman suffrage in the United States, were the leading points last night brought out in addresses delivered before a small but enthusiastic audience of Prescott republican women at the community house by Mrs. H. A. Guild, chairman of the National Women Speakers' Bureau and representative in Arizona of the republican National Committee of Women Speakers, and Alfred Gale, republican candidate for representative in the state legislature.

Despite the snowy weather, the audience assembled to hear Mrs. Guild, the leading speaker of the evening, gave a warm reception to the pertinent remarks of this capable woman, whose work has won her a distinguished place in women's activities throughout the southwest.

Mr. Gale first gave a brief address on the subject of the eleventh hour attempt of the democratic party to enlist the sympathy of the women voters of the country by coming out for woman suffrage after it had been nationally won. Beginning with the first agitation for woman suffrage in this country, Gale demonstrated by figures taken from the Congressional Record that the republican party had won the right of the vote for the women in this country.

In December, 1866, S. C. Pomery, republican representative from Kansas first introduced a motion for woman suffrage in the House of Representatives. This effort was followed between 1878 and 1896. In Jan. 25, 1887 an amendment to the constitution providing for woman suffrage, introduced by Senator Henry W. Blair of New Hampshire, was voted on as follows: Republicans, 16 ayes, 11 noes; Democrats, no ayes, 27 noes.

In 1914, the vote on a similar bill showed the republicans clearly in the forefront of the movement toward woman suffrage. The vote was republicans, 20 ayes, 12 noes; Democrats, 14 ayes, 20 noes. A bill introduced into a democratic congress in 1915 by Frank W. Mondell, republican representative from Wyoming, resulted in 85 ayes and 33 noes from the republicans as against 86 ayes and 171 noes from the democrats. The 64th congress voted on a similar measure on Sept. 24, 1917, with 95 ayes and 30 noes from the republicans, and 85 ayes, 77 noes from the democrats.

The republican record of support for woman suffrage was made plain again in Jan. 10, 1918, the vote being republicans, 69 ayes, 33 noes; democrats, 103 ayes, 103 noes. In October 1918, with two votes lacking, the republican vote was again in favor of suffrage. It stood 27 ayes to 10 noes, the democrats registering 26 ayes to 21 noes.

"This vote shows that 72 percent of the republican vote, as against 56 percent of the democratic, was for woman suffrage," Gale said. "And at the eleventh hour the democrats wholeheartedly reconsidered their attitude, in an advertisement in the Ladies' Home Journal, in which they congratulate the state legislatures who ratified the suffrage amendment and call upon those who did not to do so. It seems to me that the democrats now realize the importance of the women's vote, and are making this eleventh hour move in a vain effort to capture it."

The rest of Gale's speech was devoted to explaining to the women the amendments to the State Constitution to come before the voters at the November election.

The address of Mrs. Guild was received with enthusiasm by her hearers. She spoke quietly and effectively, touching upon the historical development of the republican and democratic parties. Bringing out the parallel rise of the two parties, the republicans through the federalists, standing on a strong union, and the democrats through the anti-federalists, standing for a loose union, Mrs. Guild made clear the relation of historic republican policies to the present crisis in American national government.

"There have been three great crises in our national history," she said, "and so far, the nation each time has been pulled through the critical period by the republicans. The first time the nation was saved by republican principles was at the Constitutional Convention in 1787. At that time the states were mutually hostile and suspicious. The federalists, the republicans of that time, saved the day by a determined stand for a strong union."

"Again, after the Civil War, the republican party, organized in 1850, and carried into power with the election of Lincoln, brought the nation safely through the dangerous period of reconstruction. We are now facing the third great crisis in our national life, and throughout my travels east and west I have perceived a great movement of the people toward the republicans as the party of safety and reconstruction."

"The women in the east and in the west," said Mrs. Guild, "are greatly interested in the republican campaign. There was never such interest as there is now, and for this there are three reasons. First, this is the third time that we have faced a perilous national situation. Second, this is the second time that great block of citizens has been taken into the voting element of the nation, if the first group was taken in. And third, we are nearing the close of the most important political campaign in our history."

Those who heard Mrs. Guild's sincere homage to Governor Campbell applauded vigorously. "Will the time ever come," she asked, "when Arizona will recognize a real leader and rally around him? I need hardly say that I refer to Tom Campbell. Women representing great philanthropic organizations in the east have had occasion to come into contact with our governor, and not one of them, but has had praise for a man of such far-seeing, so great an up-builder. One of these women said to me, 'I have met many men, but never one who knew his subject so thoroughly.'"

Mrs. Guild spoke concerning other republican candidates, stating that she considered Miss Elsie Toles, republican candidate for state superintendent of schools, a woman well fitted for the position, and one who stood for fair play and a square deal. Rudolph Kuchler, republican candidate for state tax commissioner, was also praised by Mrs. Guild, who pointed out his qualifications as a man and a citizen for the position.

Following the addresses by Alfred Gale and Mrs. Guild, Miss "Babe" Morrison sang "Harding's the Man for Me," a new song which made a great hit. Mrs. Lester Ruffner accompanied Miss Morrison at the piano.

Miss Morrison's charming singing was followed by a few remarks by Aaron Powers on "How Women Can be Really Useful," a series of remarks which, delivered in Mr. Powers' witty and amusing manner, elicited considerable laughter from his hearers.

Following the program, the audience adjourned to consider tea and republican cookies, little cakes bearing the names of republican candidates in chocolate, served by Mrs. C. T. Joslin and Mrs. E. Wells, with the assistance of Mrs. Neil Clark, Mrs. Jack Jones, Miss Fisher and Mrs. Lyle Abbott.

INDIANS LEAVE

Wilmer C. Roberts, the big brother of the Navajo and Hopi Indians whose exhibit at the fair aroused such interest, yesterday started on the homeward journey to Antelope Springs with his charges. Roberts was hugely pleased with the fair and the Mile High City, and the reception its citizens gave him and his Indian craftsmen. Before leaving, he said, "You have a fine city here, and you've given a wonderful fair. I'd like you to say to the people of Prescott that my Indians and I enjoyed every moment of our stay here. We are coming back next year with a larger exhibit, which we hope will be as favorably received as this one was." And there is no doubt but that it will be.

Commercial Work

With Mrs. Lillie H. Edwards, principal, and Miss Anabelle Capers, assistant principal, as hostesses, the booth of the Prescott Business college, served as an advertisement of the growing importance of Prescott's commercial life, the demand for competent bookkeepers and stenographers by this growing city demanding an institution which aids in the supplying of them.

With a well arranged exhibit, not a few of the busy business men were quick to ask that when students had completed the course that they be notified as openings were waiting on trained minds and hands. Some had letters written while they inspected the specimens of bookkeeping, penmanship, shorthand and typewriting. Mrs. Edwards praised the fair very highly, stating that in her opinion this year the merit and attendance surpassed all previous efforts.

The Prescott forest offers the best recreational outlook of any forest in the state. This is the opinion given yesterday by M. M. Cheney of the Albuquerque office of the forest service, who arrived in Prescott Sunday and who was yesterday in conference with forest supervisor H. B. Wales.

Cheney is here to go over the Iron Springs recreation area with Supervisor Wales, in cooperation with the Iron Springs Outing Club of Phoenix.

A survey of the district was made this summer, and Cheney will now make a study of problems of sanitation, protection from erosion, etc., in order to make possible for the public the best possible use of the area.

"The Iron Spring area is the oldest and largest recreation project to be found in the newer states," Cheney said yesterday. "This area has at present 64 cottages, and with the Groom Creek, Cherry Creek, Camp Creek and Mingo mountain projects, the Prescott forest certainly has the best recreational outlook of any forest in the state."

Cheney will be here only for a few days. He regretted yesterday that he had arrived too late to see the Northern Arizona State Fair, and that he will pass through Phoenix tomorrow to take in the State Fair there. He will return to Albuquerque as soon as his study of the Iron Springs district is completed and reported to the Iron Springs Club.

DISTRICT FORESTER HERE

Assistant District Forester Aldo Leopold arrived in Prescott yesterday from Albuquerque headquarters, and will leave tomorrow for Phoenix. Leopold is in charge of the department of office operations, and is here on business with the local forest service office in charge of Supervisor H. Basil Wales.

PLAYGROUNDS ON OUR FOREST
ARE BESTALL AUTOMOBILE
SHOWS GO IN THE SHADE

The beautiful display of automobiles at the Northern Arizona State Fair eclipsed all previous displays by the handsomeness of the cars shown and the interesting manner of their exhibition, according to fair authorities.

Many handsome cars lined the tent housing the display, more appealing in the smooth lines bespeaking their raciness, luxuriousness or comfort than the finest thoroughbred on the track outside. For this is the age of the auto, and strange was the American man or woman who did not fall for one or another of the classy cars represented in the display.

The show, splendidly arranged by Julian B. Downey and local dealers, was calculated to bring out the best points of all the cars displayed. And that is just what it did. The Studebakers, exhibited by Chas. Reibeling, did not fail for an instant in their appeal. Al Weber's Appersons called forth many words of approval, as did the Chalmers, exhibited by Art Gage, and the Mitchells and Chevrolets shown by McIlvann and Pickering.

The sweepstakes for the show, and the first prize for the best display and best decorated booth were awarded to Charles Reibeling; a special prize was given the Apperson Anniversary 8 and the 6-cylinder Oldsmobile shown by Al Weber; and special prizes were awarded to Art Gage's display of Chalmers cars, the Mitchell exhibit of McIlvann, and the F B Chevrolet shown by Pickering.

WEIL'S TAKING WAYS AS TO MILK CUPS

(From Tuesday's Daily)

F. G. Weil is like the man who went into the dance and got thrown out so often he finally concluded they didn't want him there. He is the Miller Valley dairy proprietor who has won so many prizes for milk and cream at fairs and such that at Phoenix, they have virtually discontinued the department as a mere means of donating him cups and cash.

Unable to break the habit, Weil displayed his products at the Northern Arizona State fair and walked off with everything in the first prize line. This makes the fifth time he has taken sweepstakes at the Northern Arizona State Fair. Thrice, the prize has been won at the state fair in Phoenix, so that now they have cut the prize down to $5 or some such matter and he has quit lugging his milk to the capital.

Milk and butter competition was not given the prominence it should have had this year. The time is coming, in the opinion of people who are looking ahead, when dairying will be a major enterprise in Yavapai county. Some advocates of the dairy business want to start things right now while Salt River valley is selling off its dairy herds and cutting its alfalfa fields into cotton patches.

APPETIZING ARE THE COOKING DISPLAYS

Pie? Cake? Fruit?

"You said it! It was all there, attracting the eager glances of culinary connoisseurs, and making envious the appetites of boys both large and small, at the beautiful display of the culinary department of the Home Economics section at the fair.

Beautifully arranged displays of home-canned fruits and vegetables, made the shelves of this exhibit a riot of color, and the appetizing exhibits of pies and cakes evoked memories of grandmother's kitchen and aroused the envy of all good housewives.

To judge from the comments it evoked among the spectators, the culinary exhibit was one of the most interesting and best arranged on the grounds, excelling in its displays of delicious home-prepared edibles and dainties. There was a wealth of exhibits to choose from. Cooked foods, preserved fruits and baked goods, all of a superior quality, made the display the best of its kind that has yet been seen at the fair. Bread, doughnuts, cookies, pies and cakes, canned vegetables and fruits, preserves and jellies, jams and butters, pickles in glass, home-made candies, Mexican dishes and many other tempting articles vied with each other in eliciting the praise of those who take pleasure in a larder stocked with excellent things as well as of those culinary experts who delight in preparing the goods of such a larder.

The exhibit was superintended by Miss Dorothy Will, with the assistance of Mrs. Fen Hildreth, Mrs. Robert Birch, Mrs. Robert Geimer, and Miss Lee Lufner. The attractive signs gotten up by the girls of the seventh and eighth grades added to the special appeal of the display and called forth many words of praise. The exhibit as a whole deserved the appreciative comments it elicited, the only regret of some connoisseurs being that they were unable to open exhibits for a more detailed examination.

The list of awards in this department has previously appeared in the Journal-Miner.

Yavapai Votes
Must All Go To Phoenix For An Inspection

(From Tuesday's Daily)

PHOENIX, Oct. 18.—An order was issued this afternoon in the superior court by Judge R. C. Stanford, to the treasurer and clerk of the board of supervisors of Yavapai county, citing them to bring all the paraphernalia connected with the primary election of September 7, used in that county before the court here at once.

The order was issued in connection with the court order of last Saturday, granting Charles de Sales Wheeler an inspection of the ballots of the election as asked in his contest against Ed. B. Ross of voters' cast for Democratic nomination for secretary of state.

Wheeler and Ross were both candidates and Ross was certified as nominated. William P. Doherty was today nominated as inspector of ballots for Wheeler and Frank De Souza for Ross.

RED CROSS REX
IS POPULAR
RIBBONER

(From Tuesday's Daily)

Red Cross Rex, the dog famous for his services overseas, decorated with the Croix de Guerre by the French Red Cross and given citation and division medals by the American government, has been awarded first prize in his class at the Northern Arizona State Fair kennel show. This was Rex's first show.

Though the kennel exhibition was not a large one, it contained some excellent animals, as evidenced by the fact that most of them drew awards. Dog-lovers commented upon the evidence of pedigree, the quality of many of the animals attracting much attention. Rex was clearly a favorite, as was Chum, the toy terrier entered by Marsh Smith, who also drew first premium in his class. Rex's owner, Glenn Smith, will enter him at the Arizona State Fair next month.

A beautiful dog was Queen Callaire, a blue airedale also owned by Glenn Smith. The English bull Rex, and Bubbles, the fox terrier, owned by A. W. Smith, also occasioned many favorable remarks.

There were no sweepstakes at the kennel show, first and second prizes being awarded as follows to the best animals in their class.

Red Cross Rex, Irish terrier, owner Glenn Smith, first premium his class. Chum, toy terrier, owner Marsh Smith, first premium his class. Queen Callaire, blue Airedale, owner Glenn Smith, first premium her class. Cactus Laddie, black Airedale, owner Mrs. F. A. Pierce, first premium her class. Rex, English bull, owner A. W. Smith, first premium his class. Bubbles, fox terrier, owner A. W. Smith, first premium his class. Bubbles, fox terrier, owner A. W. Smith, first premium his class. Shull, first premium his class. FIRST SHUMATE BABY

"Dad" and "Mother" Shumate yesterday received the congratulations of their many friends over the fact they had become grandparents. Occasionally, someone was able to find Harry Shumate standing still long enough to congratulate him, too. The occasion was the birth of a baby girl at the Shumate home on Park avenue. Mrs. Shumate was formerly Miss Nell Beach of Dallas, Texas.

Bert Thorne is spending a few days in the Mile High City from his mining camp.
